

The Fort Fair.

Many people from Strathcona and Edmonton made the journey to Fort Saskatchewan yesterday to attend the annual fair and found the bar-nacle town crowded with visitors from all parts. The Fort Saskatchewan Fair has not yet reached the stage in which the sporting sections entirely overshadow the agricultural department and the latter attracted much attention. Most of the classes were filled and competition was good, the remark applying especially to the horse sections. Samples of grain and vegetables were shown which could not be beaten anywhere.

Those who preferred sports to agricultural exhibits were by no means left uncared for. In the morning a football game between Edmonton and Fort Saskatchewan in the provincial league series, resulted in a win for the team from the capital city by one goal to none.

Later in the day baseball teams representing the same two towns met in a friendly game which resulted in a tie. The tenth innings, the score being five all.

The races were close and interesting but the track was rather dusty. The free for all was won by Sunbeam, Dalton McCarthy second and Dan Patch third, time 2:34.

2:30 trot or pace—Miss Elizabeth 1st, Miss Ray, 2nd; Miss H. 3rd, time 2:38.

Pony race, open, 3 mile—Chatter, Dr. Nora Greet, 2nd—Buckingham.

Local run, 3 mile—Penny Y. 1st, Shorty 2nd, Paddy 3rd.

Pony race—Molly M. 1st, May 2nd.

Charges Against an Edmonton Alderman

At the Supreme Court in Edmonton yesterday Judge Scott commenced the inquiry into the charges made against Alderman McCauley by the Medical Health Officer to the city of Edmonton. The charges are that Alderman McCauley, without authority, visited some of the houses of ill fame in the north and west ends of the city and made improper examinations of the inmates.

Dr. B. K. C., appeared on behalf of the city and of Mr. B. G. Biggar representative accused.

In making his defence Dr. McCauley admitted that he had visited the houses, but he denied having committed any offence in any way. He said that although the warrant which he obtained from the medical health officer did not apply to all of the houses which he had visited and did not specify venereal diseases, he had considered that he was entitled to enter the houses by reason of the conversation which he had with Dr. Terran, in which he alleged, that Dr. Terran had expressed his wish that he should examine those houses he inspected in order to prevent the spread of diseases contracted through immoral relations.

The inquiry is being continued to-day.

Flour For Orient

Vancouver, July 26.—Included in the cargo of the steamer Tartan is one hundred ton shipment of flour for the Ogilvie Consulate for China and Japanese merchants.

The Canadian product is rapidly passing the American article which has been supplied to the consulates of the Orient. A new feature of the flour trade is the demand in Japan for the Ogilvie flour.

Recently, through Prince Consort, the Japanese Imperial household flour barrels. The flour is likely to move towards settling the Canadian product in the Orient.

Foreman Electrocuted

St. Louis, July 26.—Philip O'Meara, of John Labatt's bottling plant, was electrocuted yesterday for the murder of a woman in a saloon. O'Meara was sentenced to death in the state penitentiary for the murder of a woman in a saloon. O'Meara was sentenced to death in the state penitentiary for the murder of a woman in a saloon.

A Great Athletic Meet

What was undoubtedly the greatest athletic meet, in all respects ever held in Canada, was that under the auspices of the Irish-Canadian Athletic club at the island, Toronto, Saturday. The weather was favorable, crowd enormous and as enthusiastic as large, the competitions keenly contested and exciting, and three Canadian and one world's record went by the board.

There were many features, but the feature of features was the Long-haul four-mile match, which was easily won by the great Indian, John Flanagan's successful assault on the world's sixteen-pound, lacrosse man, the five-mile race and the Linden-Bonham two-mile match walking race were all stellar attractions, and interested in the program of events there had not a chance to lag. The international character of the competition, on account of the presence of several members of the famous Irish-American Athletic club, of New York, lent added interest.

Longest made a show of John J. Daley, the renowned Irish runner, who was leading Sherring by a quarter of a mile in the Greek Marathon, which he sprained his ankle. Daley came hither as a great runner, and he is a great runner, but he never ran a mile never so impressive a race as that of Saturday. He simply ran away from Daley and forced the latter to a halt. Daley and the first mile and set up a clip which dragged Daley after him at a rate at which he could not keep up. Daley made the going in the second mile. He was plainly distressed from trying to hang to Daley, and he was plainly distressed from trying to hang to Daley, and he was plainly distressed from trying to hang to Daley.

SPORTS. Lacrosse.

Locals Won Exhibition Game

The game between Edmonton and Strathcona at the fair grounds here should have commenced at 6.45, but owing to the late arrival of the Edmonton team the start was delayed until eight o'clock and it was agreed that the first period of fifteen minutes each should be played.

In marked contrast to the last game the play throughout was open and clean and only one penalty was awarded. Clarridge of Strathcona being the offender. In the third period, after a five minutes play, Young of Edmonton was struck over the head and had to retire from the game, Woods being dropped by Strathcona to even up the game. The occurrence was plainly a pure accident and no one was blamed.

In the first period Horrobin scored for Strathcona in nine minutes and in the second P. Main made the tally two. In the third period Jones notched up one for Edmonton in nine minutes and a minute later Douglas added Strathcona's third. Just before time was called Jones found the net for Edmonton and the game ended with the score three to two in favor of the home team.

The line-up follows:—

Strathcona	Edmonton
Malone	Goal	Jepson
Laidlaw	Point	Glass
Jameson	Cover	Ward
1st Defence		Beckett
N. Main	2nd Defence	Lanford
Woods		McKinnon
Humeston	Centre	Bolander
Douglas	3rd home	Sheppard
Clarridge	2nd home	Leavens
McKay	1st home	Young
P. Main	Outside home	Jones
Elliott	Inside home	Powers

Refer to Jas. M. Kelly, Calgary.

After the game Mayor Mills walked to the field and addressed the players. He voiced the desire of all interested to see the best men win and the game played in a clear and sportsmanlike manner. He was sure the Edmonton players would always be welcome in the city and to the Strathcona players and equally sure that the Strathcona players would be well received in Edmonton. He called for three cheers for the Edmonton team and after the call had been heartily responded to, three cheers for the Mayor of Strathcona were given, followed by three cheers for the Strathcona team.

It is to be hoped that the feeling shown throughout the whole proceedings will continue for the remainder of the season. Clear sport is what those who pay to see a lacrosse game desire, and games like that played night will attract bigger crowds than a slugging match interspersed with face hits.

Trouble Over Japs Landing

Vancouver, B.C., July 26.—One of the most extreme protests witnessed in the Port of Vancouver, was enacted here this afternoon, at the landing of 1,200 Japanese from the steamer Kanamaru. Mr. Markham, Japanese consul, who superintended the embarkation, required each man to deposit a passport and $25 in a bag as he passed down the gangway to the dock. The Trades and Labor Council were on the alert and immediately telephoned Mr. Macpherson, M.P., who went to the dock and protested against the proceedings as an infringement of British justice and liberty.

So strong was his protest and so well founded on British law that City Solicitor Cowan, who had been called, had nothing to urge against the soundness of the contention. Mayor Beckett joined the other councillors and himself went to the ship and urged himself with the champion under the Union Jack. As a result of the protest, Consul Markham was not only stopped holding out the bag for $25 apiece but was told he would have to return the deposit already collected by him.

It is an open secret that the action of the Trades Council was not dictated entirely by a devotion to the rights of the Japanese under the British flag nor yet perhaps by a devotion to the abstract principles of British justice. The impression is gaining ground that there is something about the collecting of the circulating medium that requires explanation, especially in view of the fact that Honolulu reports show there is an idea among the Japanese there that they must spend their money in the United States before they can get it.

British Journalists Visiting West

Winnipeg, July 26.—The party of twelve well known British journalists who are touring Canada under the auspices of the Canadian Pacific railway, arrived here today and will remain here two days, leaving on Saturday evening for Calgary and the Pacific coast. The gentlemen are travelling under the direction of George Ham of Montreal, and J. M. Gibbons, of the latter city, who comprise the list of the members of the party, with the names of the paper represented, is as follows:—The Times, Ernest Brain; Morning Post, T. H. Cockburn; Daily Chronicle, Harold Begbie, writer and novelist; Daily News, H. W. Smith, chief sub-editor.

The Westminster Gazette, Kenneth Barnes.

Not Obligated To Register.

Washington, July 26.—Protests from Canada against the working of the new American Consular law, which brings forth statements from officials of the state department that native-born Americans are not required to register with American consuls unless they wish to do so voluntarily. An official of the state department today admitted reluctantly that there is nothing which can compel native-born Americans to register in order to receive their consular papers and living abroad. He said that the law, as far as it applies to the registration of native Americans is only a regulation, and that it cannot be enforced as a law. That this regulation is to determine the emigration movement of Canada to the United States, and that it is a regulation, it is claimed that a better understanding between the United States and other countries as to the status of non-resident citizens is desired. The operation of the new law is causing some friction, however, and a number of difficult situations have already arisen.

CHRONICS

Pugsley May Get Portfolio

Ottawa, July 26.—Hon. Wm. Pugsley, of St. John, N.B., was in the city today. He is to press upon the public works department certain changes to expedite the dredging now carried on in St. John harbor so as to meet the pressing requirements of the shipping interests. In the absence of Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, the acting minister of public works, who is now in his constituency, Mr. Pugsley had an interview with the premier. Sir Wilfrid said that he would have the matter attended to when the shipping interests.

Now that we have learned that the postmaster reads this excellent family journal we want to respectfully inform him through the columns that twice within a month have we found a letter and papers in a mail bag kindly loaned us to carry our papers to the office in. If we had not shaken out the bag to make sure there were none of Little Poke Bonnet's effusions in the bottom, what chance would the owners of these letters ever have of getting them? At this moment there is lying on our desk a paper received at the same moment as Little Red Riding Hood's Mothers' Tract, a paper addressed to "Mr. Pugsley, of the Public Works Department, Strathcona, Alta.," written in an exceptionally clear hand. An isolated mistake will creep in now and again but whether the postmaster knew it or not they were occurring with such frequency as to justify all we said and more.

Every case we cited of dissatisfaction with the post office service was brought up by this notice. We made no enquiries, conducted no crusade, sought no cause for attack on any man or woman connected with the institution; so that Grandma's little gold statue of an unkind and uncharitable attack is like her usual croaking-nommes. We can furnish the names on every occasion, but we will continue to exercise our right to be the judge of whom they shall be given to and we certainly will not give them up because little Granny in the Poke Bonnet's tract.

We got a half page of advertising yesterday, which, had it been published in any paper that would or could be read, would be worth some money. However, we are thankful for even small advertisements.

THE HAT BOOMING

(Hullion Herald)

Medicine Hat, Alta., is booming since John T. Hall went there. A lively stable recently changed hands.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham, leader of the Opposition in Ontario, is in Ottawa conferring with Premier Laurier. Sir Wilfrid used to say that Ontario under Mr. Ross was the right arm. The people of that province at the last legislative election, finding that utterly member of the House of Commons, Mr. Markham, Sir Wilfrid hopes to have it grafted on again under Physician Graham. It was the province, however, that Graham may be offered a portfolio. Such an event would be significant. Hon. Mr. Ross took Graham into his confidence and gave him the reins and was smothered under an avalanche of adverse ballots. Wonder if Sir Wilfrid believes in the Hoodoo?

"Notoriously scurrilous onslaught"

Golly, that must have been Little Granny's joke home! bob some.

"We say again, it is a cowardly attack," etc. Now who is the "we"? Opposed to? Surely Granny hasn't got tape worm.

"Or stand convicted by the public"

When I come in out of the sun, it is the weather, the heat has been given you the simplest. Convinced before whom? The man who buys the wheat from the farmers?

The consensus of opinion of the best authorities is to the effect that the surest evidence of a man's descent from the donkey is that he parts his hair in the middle and his name on one side.

There is some good reading in yesterday's issue of the Plaindealer, the first we have noticed in its columns. It is copied from the Chronicle and it is a pity it is spoiled in the printing.

For the dissemination of our news among the readers of the Plaindealer, if there are any, we thank thee, Brother.

Well Known Educationalist III

Dr. J. A. McEllan, one of Ontario's best-known educationalists, is seriously ill at his home, 83 McPherson avenue. Dr. and Mrs. McPherson removed from Hamilton to Toronto last month. In May, 1906, the doctor resigned the principalship of the Ontario Normal College, Hamilton, owing to ill-health, and last spring he was given a gratuity of $4,000 by the Ontario Government. He was principal of the School of Pedagogy, in Toronto, from 1890 to 1900, and it is his removal to Hamilton, Ontario, that the name was then changed to that of the Ontario Normal College, and Dr. McEllan continued to be principal.

Prior to the institution of the School of Pedagogy he was inspector of high schools for a number of years. He has been in poor health for three or four years and his condition at present is regarded as very critical.

Launch Upset Four Lives Lost.

Toronto, July 26.—An appalling drowning accident which has shocked the entire community, occurred last night during a sharp thunder storm. A party of nine young men, from the Junction left Sunnyside about nine o'clock for a pleasure trip in the gas-launch Danline, a home-made craft. Of the entire party, one in all, and he is so bruised and shaken from his awful experience that he can tell little of how the accident happened. George Shields, 19 years old, crawled home early this morning and told his friends that the launch upset, but that he got off. Perhaps Sir Wilfrid hopes to have it grafted on again under Physician Graham. It was the province, however, that Graham may be offered a portfolio. Such an event would be significant. Hon. Mr. Ross took Graham into his confidence and gave him the reins and was smothered under an avalanche of adverse ballots. Wonder if Sir Wilfrid believes in the Hoodoo?

Duncan Marshall's Successor.

(Special to the Chronicle)

Ottawa, July 26.—John Duncan, business manager of the Ottawa Free Press, goes to fill a similar position on the Edmonton Bulletin.

The above statement, which implies the retirement of Duncan Marshall from the business management of the Bulletin. One rumor is that Mr. Marshall may be appointed to a government position and another that he is retiring from the management of the Bulletin to take the stump for the party, probably in the west.

When Duncan Marshall came to Alberta it was with a great flourish and he was going to sweep the west. Rumors have been leaking out from time to time, but he was not here and he was with the Bulletin itself and other papers in Alberta persisted in remaining in circulation despite the presence of this Little Jack the Giant Killer. Mr. Marshall is a clever slipshod, a fluent jaw smith, a machine politician of both skill and experience, but these qualifications are not the only requisites for a newspaper manager and do not produce that which is a commodity that makes the motto, Alberta Journalism is a thing to be cringed at which, though it is a retirement.

CURRENT COMMENT.

That anemic little Old Mother Hubbard among periodicals made another weak into the dictionary yesterday and charged this journal with making a scurrilous onslaught on Postmaster Thomson because we have taken the part of the people and have given specific instances of gross blundering and incompetency on the part of the post office staff. "No names are mentioned," says little lickspittle, and he refers to the fourteen letters incident. Why did he not mention the case of the letter from Leduc that took twenty-four days in delivery? He doesn't need the name in that case, for the postmaster complained to the recipient the next day after our article appeared, because the matter was made public through the columns. This bantam champion of the post office staff might well if he wanted to be truthful that we mentioned the name of John May and the next day after our reference to his case appeared he got some papers at the office and did not have to ask for them. The man who got the fourteen letters at one time is a responsible business man and as much given, in our observation, to telling the truth as Little Pinhead. He is prepared to make affidavit at any time to the facts.

If the postmaster questioned his whole staff sharply on the subject of the matter so much the worse for some one of the staff.

No one complained to the postmaster, we are told. Is that what a postmaster is for—to hear complaints? If the service was as it ought to be there need be no room for complaint. One of our subscribers avers that when he complained he was laughed at. We have never mentioned Mr. Thomson's name in connection with the matter. We have nothing but the highest respect for him and we have made due allowance for the transformation of the office. We believed and still believe that he will make a good postmaster, but he has been there for nearly four weeks, still a sufficient time to pick out the weak spots in his assistance. When his fed-up spolia talk of a "vindictive" attack he is again monkeying with words that he lacks the brains to understand.

The information of "second hand" is still in first class repair.

The spectacle of the little "cigar" man down street, that is all "cigar" to all men where there is a penny in sight, calling anyone or anything cowardly would be laughable if it weren't disgusting.

We made our criticism in the open. We made sure of every charge before we published it. We have frequently been congratulated on our action on the subject and so far as the service in Alberta is concerned we have the support of the Winnipeg Free Press, the latest Liberal journal east of the Great Lakes; the Saskatoon Phoenix, one of the brightest newspapers in Saskatchewan; the Daily News, the bright new light in Calgary; the Winnipeg Telegram, the general public and our own experience and observation.

The postmaster and his staff are unfortunate in their chicanery.

We yesterday received the statutory postal privileges from the department at Ottawa, for which we are extremely grateful. We may say further that reports are coming in with pleasing frequency, that the local service is much improved these last few days.

We propose to be neither unkind nor uncharitable and will extend a word of praise whenever and wherever it is due, just as we will criticize fearlessly any public matter that comes to our notice.

THE PLAINT OF A PLAINDHEAL
Basking in peace in the summer sun
Strathcona smiled upon Edmonton.

The breath of June and the day was fair.

The "sneakers" danced in the balmy air.

His whiskered cheek with a smile was spanned
As he stood with a fountain pen in hand.

And he laughed as he doffed his bob-tailed coat
And the villainous breed of fakers smote.

So he pounded away until nearly dark,
Then he suddenly felt he might lose his mark.

So he swallowed himself and crawled down the tree
And said no more of the G.T.P.

And the new days came and the old days went
And papa asked was there any rent?

And the neighbors laughed at the little fool
And wondered they hadn't sent him to school.

And Mill Creek often said with a sigh
There has this people's hero gone?

Years a few had come and passed
And the trains sped on in the winter blast.

For never yet since that bright spring time
Had the grafters changed the railroad line.

Over the ties a wen, we man
Cautiously climb, clem, clem, clem, clem.

A flush appeared on his face forlorn
And his trouser knees were somewhat torn.

Where are you going?" the watchman cried.
And he answered back as on he hid.

I'm making my way to Clover Bar
To grade
To look for the pledges the liars made.

And he turned away with a heart full
And he never was heard of, nor none no more.

Not A Free-Trade Project.

Hamilton Herald (Independent)

It is not surprising to learn that Harold Cox, M.P., secretary of the Cobden club, denounces the "all-red" transportation project. In opposing it he has the benefit of Canada's principles and those of the Cobden club. The British government, he declares, "has no right to bleed the British taxpayers for the benefit of Canada." He might consistently have gone even further and asserted that the government has no right to bleed the British taxpayers for the benefit of any British commercial enterprise even if it can be demonstrated that the enterprise will benefit Britain. For that is sound free-trade doctrine, to demand and defend which the Cobden club exists. "Laissez faire" (let alone) is the watchword of the downright free-traders—no state aid or favour to any industry or class of industries; leave all to private enterprise; remove all governmental restrictions from private enterprise. State aid in the establishment of a line of fast steamers is therefore in direct opposition to free-trade doctrine.

It must have been hard for Harold Cox to openly denounce a project promoted by the Canadian statesman whom the Cobden club so recently delighted to honor by presenting to him its medal. Sir Wilfrid is not quite such a staunch free-trader as he was when he got the Cobden medal, and told his English audience that Canada did not desire any preferential treatment in the British market in return for the Dominion preferential tariff. For some years he must have been regarded by the Cobden club as a backslider and now that he comes forward with a commercial project which requires big government subsidies, Harold Cox and the rest of the Old Guard have probably given him up as a recreant to the good cause.

One cannot but admire the stalwart and thoroughgoing defence of their principles by these representative British free-traders but at the same time most Canadians are probably of the opinion that it is well for Canada that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has the welfare of his country more at heart than the welfare of free trade principles.

Ottawa, July 20.—Hon. Wm. Pugsley, of St. John, N. B., was in the city today. Dr. Pugsley also saw Mr. Butler, the deputy minister of railways in regard to some necessary improvements in the Intercolonial Railway at St. John and Mr. Butler said that the matter would be attended to at once. The presence of Dr. Pugsley gave rise to the report that the question of the vacant portfolio in New Brunswick was under discussion, his name being prominently mentioned for the same.

NURSERY NOTES.

The firstborn is fortunately born if his young mother has wisely resolved to go slowly with infant theories and feel her way carefully and never go to extremes.

For the first week or two the child requires but slight attention. He must be bathed, dressed, fed and kept warm. Otherwise, for the most part, he is best when left alone, gradually to learn that he is alive and make use of his organs and senses.

He requires no handling save that which is necessary during the process of bathing, dressing, feeding, and occasional turning from side to side. More than this is not good for him.

Then he must be kept warm. To do this it is not necessary to overheat him with wraps or keep the room at a bathhouse temperature. If you do, you will have a baby as tender as a forced plant.

Choose the clothing with a view to combined lightness and warmth. If the weather is at all cool, be certain that each little garment is warm before putting it on the body. Do not put the socks on while the feet are cold. First warm the little members with your own warm hands or by an open fire. Warm the hands in the same way and if necessary, draw over them a pair of worsted mittens and let them remain for awhile until entirely warm.

To press a non, pants or a large plain surface, take an old piece of cotton material (a pillowcase would do) and after placing the material to be pressed with the right side down, thoroughly wet the mangle and wring it out, place it smoothly over the material and run until dry. If this is done to one part of a dress, all parts must be treated in the same way, but will be noticeable where it has been pressed.

A Self Annihilated Suitor.

By Jeannette Walden.

Copyright, 1907, by G. D. Daniels.

"A man must be willing not only to efface himself, but to let himself out of existence if necessary, for my sake," Jean Boyce made this statement without premeditation, driven to it by sheer despair. It was the third time that she had been called upon to give her reason for not acquiescing in Maurice Ankeny's belief that they were made for each other, and this time she wanted it to be final.

"Oh, no!" her tone was matter-of-fact—"I couldn't! It isn't in me."
"Oh, I see. You demand it as a complimentary quality in me?"
He continued his scrutiny of her face as a smart tramp with a man and woman in it mumbled the corner. The woman's a stolid blunder with a mountain of lavender plumes on her head—was driving.

The warm color that came to Jean's cheeks as she returned the man's recognition deepened as the tramp rolled past, for she knew that Maurice was watching her, and she felt the new, strange lateness in his gaze.

As for Ankeny, his expression suddenly became a mixture of calumny and stern determination. "I'll do it," he exclaimed. And for this apparently eccentric remark he was rewarded by a stinging look of inquiry from a pair of dark eyes.

"Do what?"
"Efface—I mean extinguish—myself by getting him for you."

The dark eyes became inscrutable. "If you want Harold Buckley, you shall have him," he continued precipitately as they mounted the steps of

ANOTHER AUTOMOBILE CASE TOOTING BY

JEAN BOYCE'S HOME. "It will be all easy matter. He is only dazed by his millions. It's you he really cares for. Maurice Ankeny has no right to buy."
"Maurice Ankeny, I'll never speak to you again," as Jean faced him with this emphatic announcement her blushes were fully accounted for by her anger.

"All right. I might as well die one way as another," and he was gone.

In the days that followed Jean Boyce and a new experience. Maurice Ankeny had never stayed away so long before, and she had missed him, a condition she had not thought possible. Still there was the counteracting influence of Harold Buckley and the heiress. It is true, she never realized that she cared for Buckley until she found that he was out of her reach. But Jean's self-analysis could go no deeper than this, and her state of mind became classic once more, when one afternoon Harold Buckley called.

Jeannette's resentment was not wholly dissipated by Buckley's keenly correct valuation of the heiress. "She was falling for a husband," he said. "It's a good thing just to know a woman. It makes me expert at estimating character."

He interpreted this last remark, "A man does not need to be bitter more than once," and she found herself wondering why she did not feel deterred by his confidence. Still she felt gratified by her triumph in bringing him back. She did not understand until afterward why his next remark quenched her elation.

"She has Maurice Ankeny on her hook now, or, rather, he took her by storm. I never saw a woman conquer so." He spoke contemptuously. "But he's welcome."

"How would it be," observed Jean. Then all at once she thought of Maurice's strange promise to her, and she wondered—No, it could not be. He only wanted a cloak for his mercenary ambitions.

Jeannette did not feel altogether comforted by the ease with which Harold assumed his old relations. Still, when he asked her to take an automobile ride that same evening she accepted.

Her pride in Harold Buckley's personal attractiveness was extended to his splendid machine as they went bounding over the road with a red October sunset in their faces.

Another automobile came looking to behind them and passed them on the road. It was occupied by Madge Racer and Maurice Ankeny.

The vague depression that had been haunting Jean became poignant. She felt missed.

"Queer taste he has," she observed, with a curl of her lip. Then to hide her pain she conjured a spirit of daring.

"Oh, let's pass them! Do, do?"

Harold Buckley, ready to please her or possibly for reasons of his own, entered into the sport and put on power with great abstinence.

Jeannette was almost delirious with the excitement of swift motion. "How jolly!" Then came a sudden jolting and a desperate adjusting of brakes. They had struck a rocky place in the road. Before Harold could slow up Jean was almost shaken from her seat. The sun's rays, on a level with their eyes, blinded them. There was a loud report, a scream from Maurice Ankeny's auto, which had grazed in stopping, and they toppled over into a shallow ditch, with an extra tire hanging to one of their wheels.

Jeannette felt a sharp pain in her arm as she picked herself up; then the direction of what followed made her forget herself. The blood heaved followed up her cheeks by an attack upon Harold, who had just extricated himself whole from the ditch.

"Mr. Buckley this is a great way to drive!" she cried in her high voice with its slightly foreign accent. "Why don't you look at your road?"

But she was instantly mollified by Harold's apologetic and shook hands with him quite sweetly.

Maurice, who had got to work without loss of time, had almost finished putting on a new tire when Jean felt so faint that she had to sit down on the grass. The pain was coming back into her head.

It was just then that Maurice Ankeny happened to look over his shoulder. He stared out roughly to Harold, who was still busy with the heiress. "Don't you see the girl is hurt?"

He got to his feet, but in a second they were all bending over her. She assured them that it was only a sprained wrist.

Maurice gave Buckley his handkerchief, ordering him to bandage the injured arm tight, and few back to work again at the farm.

Jeannette received a further impression through her pain that there was a rivalry and almost an altercation. Maurice seemed to be out of patience with everybody, and the heiress played him a close second. Jean couldn't see all the time, but she heard Madge Racer's voice grow shriller and shriller.

"No, Mr. Buckley must take the back seat with Miss Boyce. I'll ride in front."

But Mr. Buckley said that some one with such the disabled machine came lastly to Jean that he felt the wind of rapid motion against her face brought everything clear to her. Maurice at her side looked back, sitting over her shoulder and swore under his breath.

"All right!" he questioned, seeing her looking at him. "Glossa I suppose them. She thought she was in a car. You want to take her over there?"

"I didn't know her." Her lips sounded far away.

"Oh, yes, you didn't. You're not like to see the heiress in the suit fix."
